Leonid Prymak was born in the former Soviet Union. A concert violinist by training, he began writing to explore his personal experiences with the paranormal-experiences beyond scientific explanation. According to his family, his ability to dream about the future was inherited from his mother. One of his inexplicable childhood dreams was that he would live in the United States. That dream came true: he now resides in Virginia. When he is not playing violin with the Richmond Symphony, Mr. Prymak can be found writing, tending to his various business ventures or sharing the gift of his playing at his book signings. Otherwise he spends time with his two children, whom he believes also have inherited paranormal abilities. The children's book, Adventures of Siberian Cat Katerina, is his second work. A window into the future, it is intended for children with curious minds and a desire to learn about many different fields that are not usually explored in school. His first book, Forbidden Dreams, received a very warm reception from the readers and is very prominent on .com The novel, Forbidden Dreams, draws heavily on Mr. Prymak's paranormal experiences, but also on his life as a symphony musician in Russia and the United States. Although the characters in his love story

Forbidden Dream are loosely based on people he has known, the plot and the characters in it are the fruits of Mr. Prymak's fertile imagination-or, if not, they are perhaps a premonition of some events yet to happen.

My 12 year old daughter, who actually has owned a Siberian cat, got this book and devoured it. She's the type who adores the Warriors book series. I would say if your child likes Warriors, they would like this one. We are watching for the author to release Book Two.
