Makoto Shinkai is the author of your name., The Garden of Words, and 5 Centimeters Per Second. Ranmaru Kotone is the illustrator for the manga adaptations of your name. and The Girl Who Leapt Through Time.

Finished this manga on vacation in one night and i look forward the second volume soon

Keeps me wanting to read more.

The other day, this came up and the premise inspired me to order a copy. your name is like Freaky Friday done in a more dramatic style. We have Mitsuha, a girl living in a small rural village and Taki, a boy in Tokyo and what happens when they find they've swapped bodies. As you might guess, both find themselves in highly confusing situations and trying to figure out each others' lives. When they start body swapping every few days, they develop a system of messaging to try and keep matters in line. Of course, there are problems. Taki is a rough and tumble city guy and suddenly he has to be convincing as a country girl. Mitsuha takes a liking to one of Taki's beautiful co-workers and decides to set them up on a date. I liked your name; it's easy to imagine the incredible difficulty of finding yourself living the life of someone else and the potential embarrassment of somebody being in charge of your life for a day. A very solid series and I hope Volume 2 continues the pace.

The story is pretty much the same than the movie or the book, but I love the small differences with the story, and fill some of the holes. Must of the mangas from movies (summer wars is a good example), explain or show sides of the characters you didn't see in the movie, I really recommend this manga after you wash the movie.

For those who do not know the movie or book, this is a very well done drama as opposed to the slapstick style comedy that you often see with this type of premise. For those of you who do know the story, I highly recommend this adaptation of the story. I feel it fits well with original intent of the story.

"For some reason, Mitsuha and I never swapped again." the film is stunning, and the manga is absolutely living up to the story.

Beautiful!
