Amira's Totally Chocolate World (Muslim Children's Library)

Synopsis

Amira loves chocolate so much that every night before she goes to sleep, she asks God to make everything chocolate. On Eid ul-Fitr, she wakes up to find a totally chocolate world! At first she loves her new world, but when she discovers that she misses all the beautiful colors in nature, she realizes that God, the Creator, knows best. Chocolate: it's undeniably irresistible, and in one form or another, adored by many. If you appreciate the value of chocolate, then join Amira in her totally chocolate world. J. Samia Mair is a freelance writer whose work has been published in magazines, books, and scientific journals. She writes in several genres, including children's fiction, short stories, essays, book reviews, scientific articles, and poetry. Prior to her current work, Mair was on the faculty of the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health. She also practiced law for over eight years.

Customer Reviews

"We fall in love with Amira from the beginning of the book. Like many children, she wishes for something without thinking of what it means and what would happen if the world really was made of chocolate. This book provides an opportunity to reflect on all the things in our lives that we should appreciate." Muslim Kids books

A creative and imaginative way for children to appreciate what God gives them. It's fun and playful as what child doesn't want to see a world filled with chocolate? four-year olds can appreciate it, but the number of words on each page is for slightly older children (5 and up). My four-year old loved it, but I did shorten it a bit when I read it to him. Overall I'm really glad I bought this and I share this with my class as well.

Targeted to Muslim children, it is actually a book that can be used in a secular setting as well.

My daughter consistently reaches for Amira for her night time story. A good story with a subtle message about Allah's creation.

Our KG class was fascinated that a world of chocolate can be true! Our 1st graders loved the photos! I first gave this book to a 3rd grader who loves chocolate, and she passed it down to her younger sister and now she passed it down to her younger sister in KG. So fun to read over and over! Thank you Samia!

My daughter loves chocolate and loves this book. She often asks to read it before bed. Well done, me!

My son likes to lick this book up. It is sweet with a nice message. Would buy it again as a gift.

My niece loved this book. The only issue is she won't put it away. It helps that her name is Amirah also.

We had to read the book over and over to my granddaughter.
