Gr 3-5-Despite repeated references to the "thrill of the hunt" in Deer and descriptive opening scenarios in every volume, these introductions for young anglers and hunters (Camping is the odd title out) fail to provoke real enthusiasm or provide sufficiently specific information. Though the color photos do show young people of both sexes in camouflage or blaze orange vests armed with guns, bows, or fishing rods as appropriate, the texts are skimpy. For example, in Deer readers are encouraged to field dress their kills but are not shown how, and in Bowhunting prospective hunters are left to guess what a "string silencer" might be. Coverage is not systematic either: a list of bow-hunted animals includes bears(!) but not fish even though fish are mentioned later, and the techniques in Fishing do not include fly fishing. I was excited about this book for my nephew as he caught the fishing bug and there aren't many child friendly easy to understand publications. I feel the book doesn't inform enough on the different kinds of techniques, lures, gear, and fish. It's more of a brief story book than a guide.

Bought for grandkids who were resistant to learning to read. They'd rather be fishing or hunting!

great book, got it for my grandson with down syndrome. the pics are fantastic, easy for kids to hold and they can look at it again and again and again. Bright colors, GREAT LITTLE BOOK

You can get the same information at any Fishing store free. Not at all what I expected in content or presentation.

Our 7 year old son is passionate about fishing! This book is a great addition to his collection!

The boy like it ok but it was a quick read and was quickly set aside. I am not sure it was worth the money for his time.

I gave this to my great nephews for Easter. It is well written and explains the basics of fishing. They keep the book in their tackle boxes.

I sent this to a third grader that I met on a mission trip to KY. He clearly loves fishing which his grandpa taught him. Grandpa has since passed. Just wanted to put a light in his eye.
