Create A Bug Out Bag For Emergency Survival Situations: How Preppers Prepare Their Go Bags For Evacuations To Survive Disasters (Disaster Preparation And Survival Book 2)

Synopsis

Disaster can strike at any time. Are you prepared? Sometimes, as with a hurricane, you may get some notice; other times, in the case of a fire or an earthquake, you'll receive no warning at all. Most of the time, the disaster will leave your home and the surrounding area more or less intact. I've been in several earthquakes that damaged the furniture and windows of my apartment, but otherwise, everything was fine. When I lived in the mountains, there were forest fires that burned close to where I lived, but fortunately, there was no damage to my residence. Regardless of whether your residence is damaged or not, you may be required to evacuate the area. This can happen for many reasons. When I lived in the mountains, several evacuations were implemented because it appeared to the authorities that there was some danger that a fire would burn through the town. Fortunately, the fire department was able to control the fire before that happened. After a disaster like a chemical spill, the authorities may order residents to evacuate immediately. It may be several weeks or longer before anyone is allowed back into their homes. Even local police action due to criminal activity can require a quick evacuation. Police generally ask residents to stay in their homes during these situations. In the United States, plenty of warning is given before a hurricane occurs. In these cases, authorities may order mass evacuations of whole cities. When you are ordered to evacuate or if you evacuate on your own free will, you generally don't have a lot of time to gather your belongings and the things you'll need. You may have just a few minutes to get out of your home. The best preparation for evacuation is to create what is called a bug out bag. These are also known as go-bags, as in, "grab it and go!" If you haven't already created your bug out bag, you need to do so as soon as possible. Use this book as a guide to stocking and maintaining your bug out bag over time.

Interesting

I received a copy of this book for an honest review - I found this book very helpful with planning for an emergency. As a single mother of two, I worry about how my children and I will manage if a major disaster hit. Living in California earthquakes are common and we are due for a large one, so this book was exactly what I needed to start putting together a plan that will work for us. There were many great tips about how to pack a survival bag that I had not considered and the author's first person experience makes me feel more confident with his suggestions. I will be making a Bug Out Bag tonight for all three of us and will be setting reminders on my computer every 3 months to check the batteries, food bars and other items that could go bad so we are not caught off guard. Great, quick read with an easy flow. I read it on a lunch break at work and now suggest it to all my friends and family. Well worth the read!

Excellent short book on how to put together an effective Bug-out bag in case one needs to evacuate an area or home subject to a major disaster or calamity--like a raging forest fire, hurricane, tornado or earthquake! Many reminders on what to include for maximum survival and what to avoid. A must read in today's fast changing and unpredictable world.

The author covers the basics of emergency preparedness, focused on what you should have pre-packed and ready to take with you and your family in case of disaster or evacuation. Clearly laid out, logically organized and covering all the main elements of what you may need in various situations. Please note: I received a free copy of this book in exchange for my honest review. My review copy was not formatted for the iPhone, requiring enlarging each page.
