Wings Over Montana: A Celebration Of Wild Birds

Synopsis

Acclaimed wildlife photographer Donald M. Jones loves the outdoors and its creatures, but he has a special passion for birds. And he's outdone himself with this photographic collection devoted entirely to Montana's feathered residents. Jones' exquisite camera work portrays birds' behaviors and unique charm. Daniel Casey provides an informative foreword and chapter introductions. AWARDS: Honor Book, 2006 Montana Book Awards

Considered one of the nation's best wildlife photographers, Donald M. Jones has spent the last twenty years viewing and photographing wildlife from the Florida Everglades to the high Arctic, but his first love is for his home state of Montana. Jones' photographs have appeared in numerous periodicals, including Audubon, Sierra, National Wildlife, Time, Field & Stream, and Outdoor Life.

Made nice table gift for friend who sits and watches the birds in the yard from her sitting room.

The photography of Donald M. Jones is stunning; it captures flight in a remarkable way. His observation of light, as a photographic artist, and his understanding of natural habitat are clear. His respect for wildlife and patience for waiting 'til a moment is just right make this a topnotch book to own, for each photograph is a work of art. I am pleased to have purchased this book. Kirsten P. Stromberg

I just saw this book today in a gift shop in Montana. I bought his other book "Montana Wildlife Portfolio" and will also buy his "Wings" book. If you like wildlife, Montana, the outdoors, and great photography, I highly recommend this book and also his Wildlife book. My 12 year old grandson was also impressed, so I can recommend these books to young or old. It is very high quality re-production by Farcountry Press. A bargain at the listed price.

this book isa book with pictures of winged creatures of montana. these are fantastic pictures in their habitat. this book would make a great coffee table book.

Bird lovers? You have to appreciate the photography and moments captured here. Not a bird lover? Look at the photography talent.
